The Center is dedicated to assuring that inter-disciplinary stakeholders, especially those on the front lines of protecting Pennsylvania's children have access to timely and reliable policy, practice and research updates. C4CJ has extensive expertise and demonstrated effectiveness in connecting agents of change with insight about the historical context and development of policy and practice directly impacting at-risk children and families. Our CJAR publication is a valuable tool that will aid you as you engage policy makers, improve practice, and to more fully inform decision-making and advocacy. The CJAR reviews and reports on prevention and intervention budgets, policies and strategies – across the continuum – impacting children, youth and families. The CJAR is published, at least twice a month, and may be produced with more frequency, if warranted, to further subscribers' access to timely and relevant information.
